MORROW — Executive Launch Brief

You shouldn't have to know coffee to know your coffee.

Premium coffee offers more choice than ever—from origins and roast profiles to tasting notes and brewing methods. But for the everyday consumer, that choice can make buying premium coffee feel complicated. Why pay more if you are still unsure whether you will actually enjoy the cup?

MORROW turns that uncertainty into a personalised discovery experience.

Designed for curious, urban coffee drinkers who value quality but do not consider themselves coffee experts, MORROW helps customers find a premium coffee that fits their taste, routine and occasion.

Its launch experience, "Meet Your Coffee," asks customers a few simple questions about how they like their coffee. AI then translates those preferences into a personalised coffee profile and recommends a coffee, brewing method and origin story that suits them.

The customer benefit is simple: less guesswork, more confidence and a premium coffee experience that feels made for them. Instead of learning coffee terminology to make a better choice, customers can simply discover what they already like—and explore what they might love next.

The experience becomes smarter with every interaction. Ratings, purchases and reorders help refine future recommendations, creating a reason to return.

MORROW's success will be measured through recommendation acceptance, purchase conversion, repeat purchase, reorder/subscription and customer satisfaction.

The strategic idea is simple: MORROW does not sell AI. It uses AI to make every customer feel like their coffee was chosen just for them.